Endnotes

ⁱ Examples of bias in quasi-judicial or administrative decision making include but are not limited to:

- (a) Relationships with persons involved in the matter: Where the Elected Official or Committee or Board Member has a "sufficiently close" personal relationship with someone who has a direct interest in the outcome of the decision, that relationship may give rise to a "reasonable apprehension of bias". - (b) A pecuniary interest in the outcome of the matter.
- (c) Outside knowledge or involvement with the matter: The primary concerns in this scenario is that the Elected Official will be unable to avoid making use of information that they obtained outside the hearing thereby violating the rule that all parties "must know the case to be met" and be given full opportunity to respond to all relevant information that may form the basis of City Council or a Committee or Board 's decision; and
- (d) Comments or behavior indicating a lack of impartiality: If an Elected Official, Committee or Board Member makes any comments or engages in any activity or behaviour which may cause a reasonable person to conclude that the decision-maker is not is capable of acting in an impartial manner in the process, this may result in a finding of bias.
